GOLDEN ANECDOTES .- Various anecdotes are told of men finding gold and carrying it to the mint to get it coined. A yarn is told of an old as made to unhorse some of the dragoons Dutchman who dug up one day a piece of rock, near a cubic foot in size, that fairly sparkled with gold. Many quite rich specimens have the gold in such small particles as not to be seen by 'vulgar eyes.' But this glistened brightly, and the old man got his team, drove straight to the mint, and asked them to buy his sample or 'make it up into money for him.' They told him they did not buy such specimens, as it must be got out first. He wanted to sell it as he knew he would take for it, and he thought awhile and all persons indebted to said estate are hereby notiterminated the conflict, the Chartists told them five hundred dollars. They would not risk it, but told him if he would leave it they would get some one to get it out for him, and pay him for it when they knew what it was worth. He did so, and on being worked up it
